MATTERS OF INTEREST TO WOMEN AND ABOUT THE HOUSEHOLD

By Marion Harland.

BALTIMORE willing helper sends some useful items for the common good. There is a free - masenry among our house-wives, from Baffin's Bay Gulf of Mexico, and from the Atto the Gulf of Mexico, and from the Atlantic to the Pacific, which makes them wondrous kind to each other. The informal union is like one vast, harmonious Women's Club, banded together for the general weal or—a figure that pleases me better—one loving and mutally helpful family. It is with deep and devout gratitude that I note the growth and strengthening of this community of interest, this feeling of kinship and disposition to bear one another's burdons.

1. Having noticed for some time the evidence for and against formaldehyde as a bed-bug destroyer, I think no one is more competent to speak against it than myself. Last January my husband was taken with smallpox. He was at home over a week. As we could get no one to nurse him, and I had four bables, he thought he would go to the hospital. At home he had a very small room which only held a double bed, stand and one small chair, and one could just walk in. There was matting on the floor. You may guess how that room was kept disinfected when he went away. The Board of Health agents were here within the hour to fumigate. They did it most thoroughly, at the same time ruining everything with varnish on it. Well, that small room was never opened for four weeks, when it was made ready for my husband's return. We have cleaned house twice since, In the morning you can still smell that horrible stench which is worse to me than smallpox.

The house when we took it was infested with those bugs. When we housecleaned I rejoiced to think "No more bugs!" Over the tops of the doors we found enough to prove that when they are in the wood of the house they are safe. I always kept them out of my bed anyway. I suppose the formaldehyde thinned them out. I do not know—as I had worked so hard all summer to get rid of them, so did not have nearly so many this summer.

2. To the party who speaks of her who has a good husband should do all she can to help. MRS. E. B.

The Board of Health officers must have done their work very clumsily if the formaldehyde injured the varnished furniture. As to the survival of the fittest of the red rovers, I have to say that having once settled themselves and families in the woodwork, nothing but a thorough soaking in corrosive sublimate and spirits of turpentine will evict them. Builders and housewives who have moved into new houses, in the construction of which much unpainted pine is used, know but too well that the eggs are often actually imbedded in the very fibres of the wood, and the Jarvae emerge to horrify the dainty housemother as soon as the walls are thoroughly warmed.

I have a large, pretty, old-fashioned white shawl, edged with heavy white slik fringe, It is very old because my mother had it when she was a young girl. It was laid away for a long time and never used. Last year I brought it out and on it is a large, brown stain, something like rust, which I think must have come from being put away so long. I would be very thankful to you if you could tell me how to take the stain out. I would use the shawl a great deal if the stain were not there.

I was at one time the proud possessor

there. ILEANOR,
I was at one time the proud possessor of a similar helploom, rich with embroidery and edged with silk fringe. When it came into my hands there was in the exact center a brownish stain, such as exact center a brownish stain, such as you describe, and as one finds upon old books and MSS—the mysterious thumb-mark of Time. I put my treasure into the hands of, a professional cleaner, who returned it in perfect condition. I advise you to do the same if you can. If you must do it yourself, make lemon juice into a thick paste with table sait and cover the spot with it. Leave on for twenty-four hours, brush off the sait and sponge with alcohol and warm water. Wipe dry, and if a faint stain remains repeat the operation.

I have a pair of very fine, white undressed kid glovos, which were aparently ruined at the first wearing from holding a printed programme in my hands. Soveral of the letters and the figures are very plainly marked on the kid. Can you tell me of anything I might use to bleach the coloring matter without spoiling the gloves? K. R. C.

Can you please tell me what will take kerosene out of a gray woolen skirt? I have done nothing to it as yet. It you can I shall be very grateful. N. M. H. Cover on both sides with powdered French chalk, or with powdered French chalk, or with powdered Fuller's earth. Leave it on all night, Next day cover the powder with a piece of clean blotting paper and press with a warm iron.

He had the reputation among his neighbors of being a quiet, inoffensive, industrious farmer and no excuse but insanity has been assigned.

About 7 o'clock to-night John Krauss, a brother, went to Adolph's house to make a cail. The lights were out, but the door was unlocked and he entered the house, and upon striking a light was horrified to discover the terrible tragedy. From all that can be learned Adolph Krauss entered the house some time this atternoon armed with a sledge hammer. Without warning he struck his wife in the head, killing her instantly. Then seizing his first shild, aged twelve, he dealt a murderous blow. The other five children were killed similarly, the last being a six-months-old baby. It now looks as if the resolution of removal would be adopted by the House without a fight."

More About the Lincolns

Lee Camp Soldiers' Home. Editor of The Times-Dispatch: I see in Sunday's Times-Dispatch of March 1st an article headed "Abe Lin-

The Federals, sure of their prey, immediately built their fires, preparatory to cooking their supper, concluding to wait until daylight to make the arrest, knowing well with what a desperate man they had to deal.
The captain, with an intuition worthy of a Jackson or a Forrest, took in the situation in a moment, and having a Yankee blue overcoat, he donned the same, and coming out unnoticed through a cellar door, walked boldly up to a fire, and kloking the rails about, said, "dami it, would you burn the man's house down?" and quietly walking to the shrubbery, disappeared.

In the morning a cavalryman's horse was missing; you can draw your own conclusions what became of it.

Captain Lincoln was of the "bravest of the brave," and met a violent death in Colorado years after the war, where every "hip pocket" bore a "handy thing."

David Lincoln was a first cousin of President Lincoln's father, and among his papers (after his death) were found two letters from Abraham Lincoln then a member of Congress, inquiring about, his relations in Rockingham county, Va.

Those same letters are now in the possession of the present Abraham Lincoln, of Lacy Springs, Va., who has refused many offers of large sums of money for them.

The President's grandfather, Abraham Lincoln, emigrated from Rockingham Co., Va., with Daniel Boone, to what is now Washington county, Ky., in 1781, and was killed by the Indians in 1781, leaving two sons, Nordecal and Thomas, the latter the father of the President. Nordecal, aboy of 14, immediately killed the Indian from the cabin, as he was in the act of scalping his father. The rifle is still in possession of the family.

OLD VETERAN.

The "Door of Hope."

Editor of The Times-Dispatch:
Sir,-I have been waiting for some time in the hope of seeing an answer to President Roosevelt's "door, of hope" letter, which, you will remember, was written by him in reply to the protests of some of the citizens of Charleston, S. C. against the appointment of the negro. Dr. Crum, to the collectorship of that port. In this letter are found the following words: "I cannot take the ground that the door of hope is to be shut upon any man, no matter how worthy, purely upon the ground of race or color."

During my twenty years' residence at the North I nover ceased to marvel at the fact that the conviction was so deep-rooted there, particularly amongst the more intelligent classes, that the negrowas a black man with a white skin; that is, a citizen, lacking only opportunity to show his equality with the white man in all the greater qualifications that go to make the statesman, the jurist, or the scholar; one, in every way capable of bearing the rospensibilities of government and of developing the commerce and manufacture of the country; and, this letter of President Roosovel's would seem to Indicate that he is laboring under erroneous impression, and that from der erroneous impression, and that from the lack of opportunity to study the "now" Southern negro at close range, he would open, under the name of the door

"new" Southern negro at close range, he would open, under the name of the door of hope, the flood gate of safety, which holds in restraint the passionate torrent of racial prejudice and antipathy.

There is no necessity of opening to the negro this particular door—the door of hope of his social or economic level with the white man. The door of liberty and the door of happiness are wide open to him in the South where the negro millions know of no real wrong to redress. There does not axist on the face of the earth a people with a lot so happy as his.

The true door of hope has stood open in the South for the negro since '85, and that door few Southern men would see closed, however tight the Northern artisan would slam it in his face.

I am not one of those who look upon President Roosevelt as a man who would humilitate the Southern people by forcing negro denomination upon them. On the contrary, I consider him a noble example of American manhood, typifying in his personality the good that will result from a united North and South. It is not through any fault on his part, but only by chance, or mischance, that he has not been jarred into a knowledge, (or the knowledge jarred into him) of the real chafacter of the "new" negro; a knowledge which the Southern whites have acquired only by necessary, but actual, contact and compulsory association. Under the same circumstances that the Southern whites live, he would soon learn that if he passed the butter to the "new" negro; he would take the whole print.

If Virginia can afford to go into the liquor business, increase her revenue by money obtained from the sale of an intoxicating beverage and send a portion of the children to school on money that prevents others from attending, then we should not be prosecuted if we share in the spoils of the robber.

Let us hope that the Legislature will awake to the importance of this question. Other States are downing the saloon. The Tonnessee Legislature has just passed a law that is expected to do much to lossen drunkenness. North Carolina is getting ready to join in the anthem of Temperance Reform. Why should Virginia hesitate? Give us local option, or better still, absolute prohibition.

To the Board of Directors, Western

It becomes my sad duty to announce dered that faithful service so acceptable to the State.

First and foremost was his earnestness of purpose. In all these years very rarely did he miss a /meeting of the board, and frequently he attended when the state of his health or other considerations of self-interest might have suggested a reason for absence.

Thoroughness characterized his official work at every turn. Instinctively he seemed to take the right view of questions of policy. He was singularly fair in his judgments of men and things. His decision, once carefully made, was unswervingly adhered to. He always showed deference to the opinion of others while duly respecting his own; showed deference to the opinion of others while duly respecting his own; but his diffidence was never permitted to display itself to the projudice of courage when the situation called for decisive action.

To his associates, to the officers of the hospital, to its employes, and to the patients with whom he came in contact, he was endeared by his kind and courtely ways.

The gentleman has been dfined as "the man who is master of himself, who respects himself and makes others respect him."

and friend, Dr. Conway, was the emit bodiment of this definition, and in that one word may be found the keynote of his character.

He was an accomplished physician and much beloved among those to whom he ministered. He was a gallant Confectate, doing his duty as a private solder, and was with that herole band who made the charge at Gettysburg during the civil war.

It herefore respectfully suggest that the Board of Directors put on record suitable resolutions bearing tribute to the memory of Dr. C. C. Conway.
